GOOD TO KNOW

A draft, not an oracle.

AI plans a trip in seconds: routes, budgets, neighbourhood ideas. In 2026, one traveller in two already uses it. But it still gets things wrong. Three reflexes before you pack.

- It invents with confidence

A time, a price, a museum closed on Monday: check the concrete points. Only ten percent of generated itineraries are error-free.

- It forgets hidden costs

Tourist tax, city transport, tips, entry fees: these gaps run 15 to 20 percent of the budget. Ask for them explicitly.

- It ignores your taste

Without your wishes, pace and budget, it answers at random. The more you feed it, the more the trip fits you.

The right reflex: AI for the first draft, your eyes for the final version.

THE METHOD

Ten prompts, five stops.

A good trip is planned without spending your evenings on it. These 10 prompts turn AI into a personal travel agency: it proposes, you decide. Adapt the words in brackets to your plan.

Every prompt follows the same recipe: Role, Context, Task, Format. Copy the structure, change the brackets.

Your Tailored Route

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a travel agent who has known [destination] for ten years.

Context: I travel for [7 days] from [dates], [as a couple], I love [food and history], I hate overloaded days.

Task: build my day-by-day programme, realistic.

Format: one block per day (morning, noon, afternoon, evening) with travel times and a rest slot each afternoon. Asterisk anything you are unsure of.

What you get

A complete first draft in seconds, yours to adjust. No blank page: you start from a real plan.

The Roads Less Travelled

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a crowd-avoiding local guide.

Context: I am visiting [destination] and want to dodge overtourism.

Task: suggest three less touristy neighbourhoods or villages still easy to reach.

Format: for each, why it is worth it, how to get there, and the best time slot to see famous sights in peace.

What you get

Finds the guidebooks skip, and calm visits. AI is great at routing around the crowds.

The No-Surprise Budget

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a travel budget adviser.

Context: here is my trip [destination, length, style].

Task: build a detailed budget without forgetting hidden costs (city transport, tourist tax, tips, entry fees).

Format: a table per area with a low and high range, and the total.

What you get

The real cost, not the sticker. Forgotten fees run 15 to 20 percent: naming them avoids the nasty surprise.

The Options Test

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a neutral analyst.

Context: I am torn between [two dates] or [two areas to stay in].

Task: compare them for a traveller who wants [calm and a central location].

Format: a table of pros, cons, approximate cost, then your recommendation.

What you get

An informed choice instead of hesitating. You see the trade-offs in the open, numbers included.

The Local Table

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a food-loving local in [destination].

Context: I want to eat where locals eat, away from tourist traps.

Task: recommend five spots.

Format: for each, the kind of dish, a price range and the best time to go.

What you get

Memorable meals rather than standardized menus. Eating local is often the best travel memory.

The Customs Guide

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a cultural guide for [country].

Context: I want to arrive respectful and resourceful.

Task: prepare a practical sheet for me.

Format: ten useful phrases in [language] with pronunciation, customs to respect, gestures to avoid, and the usual tip.

What you get

Enough to arrive prepared and respectful. A few words in the local language open doors and smiles.

Plan B

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a forward-thinking planner.

Context: here is my itinerary [paste it].

Task: for each day, offer a fallback for rain or closures, close to the planned programme.

Format: one line per day, short and easy to improvise.

What you get

A trip that does not derail at the first cloud. You always have an option ready, no stress.

The Right Suitcase

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a packing planner.

Context: I am going to [destination] in [season], my activities are [planned].

Task: make me a packing list suited to the likely weather.

Format: a list by category, flagging essential documents and what is banned in the cabin.

What you get

Not too much, not too little, nothing forgotten. A list fit for the climate and your activities, not a template.

The Pocket Guide

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are my real-time interpreter and guide.

Context: [in voice or photo mode] I show you this menu, monument or sign.

Task: translate it and explain it.

Format: the translation, two sentences of explanation, and tell me if it is worth the detour.

What you get

A guide in your pocket, in real time. You understand what you see, no ten-minute searching.

The Traveller's Guardrail

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a careful checker.

Context: you gave me a full itinerary.

Task: before I book, re-check the sensitive points (opening hours, closing days, prices, distances).

Format: the list of points to confirm myself, flagging anything you are unsure about.

What you get

Travel with no nasty surprise. Only ten percent of AI itineraries are error-free: a final check changes everything.
