GOOD TO KNOW

A partner, day and night.

Learning a language costs a lot in lessons and often feels scary: we don't dare speak for fear of mistakes. In 2026, an AI (ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini, Le Chat) becomes a patient conversation partner: it talks, corrects and explains, at your pace and without judging. It won't replace a real exchange, but it trains you. Three markers.

- Speak without fear

It is available any time, never mocks you and repeats as often as needed. The perfect place to try your first sentences.

- The right pairing

You practise a little each day, the AI corrects and matches your level, you review. That loop is what makes you improve.

- Check the essentials

An AI can invent a rare word or a wrong rule. For an exam or official use, cross-check with a reliable source.

The good habit: ask the AI to match your level and correct you as you go.

THE METHOD

Five steps, ten prompts.

Learning to speak takes five steps: start with a goal, converse often, get corrected, enrich your vocabulary, then keep progressing with a steady rhythm. These 10 prompts turn the AI into your conversation partner. You speak, it supports you.

Every prompt follows the same recipe: Role, Context, Task, Format. Copy the structure, change the brackets.

My Starting Point

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a kind language teacher.

Context: I want to learn [language], my level is [beginner], my goal is [travel].

Task: assess my level with a few simple questions and set a realistic goal.

Format: three test questions, then a 30-day goal in one sentence.

What you get

A clear starting point and a reachable goal. You learn better with a target than at random.

My 30-Day Plan

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a language-learning coach.

Context: I learn [language], level [level], I can spend [15 minutes] a day.

Task: build a simple 30-day plan I can keep with my time.

Format: four weeks, one theme per week, one 15-minute activity per day.

What you get

A realistic program, week by week. A small daily step beats a long, rare session.

The Real Scene

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a conversation partner in [language].

Context: I am preparing a situation, [ordering at a cafe],
level [level].

Task: let's play the scene, you take the role of the [waiter] and keep it simple.

Format: line by line, your sentence in [language] then its translation in brackets.

What you get

A full-scale rehearsal before the real thing. A dry run takes the fear away.

The Patient Partner

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a patient friend who speaks [language].

Context: I just want to chat about [my day], my level is [level].

Task: talk with me, match your level to mine and keep it going with questions.

Format: short sentences in [language], a discreet translation, one question at the end.

What you get

A living conversation, at your pace. Speaking often helps more than reviewing in silence.

The Kind Corrector

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a kind language corrector.

Context: here is what I wrote in [language]: [paste your sentence].

Task: fix my mistakes and explain them simply.

Format: my corrected sentence, then each mistake, the rule in one line, a right example.

What you get

Your mistakes fixed and, above all, understood.

Understanding an error stops you repeating it.

The Pronunciation Corner

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a pronunciation teacher.

Context: I struggle to say [word or phrase] in [language].

Task: show me how to pronounce it by breaking down the sounds.

Format: the word in syllables, a comparison with a familiar sound, a memory tip.

What you get

A pronunciation broken down, easy to repeat. Saying it right means being understood first time.

The Ten Useful Words

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a vocabulary teacher.

Context: I want to talk about [work] in [language], level [level].

Task: give me the ten most useful words on this theme.

Format: a table, the word in [language], its translation, a short example sentence.

What you get

Ten targeted words, ready to reuse. The right word at the right time beats a long, forgotten list.

The Local Expression

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a native speaker of [language].

Context: I sound a bit textbook, I want to sound natural about [theme].

Task: give me five common expressions people really use.

Format: the expression, its meaning, when to use it, an asterisk if it is casual.

What you get

Expressions that sound natural, not a manual. Speaking like locals gets you adopted faster.

Today's Quiz

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a playful examiner.

Context: this week I learned [theme or words] in [language].

Task: test me with a short quiz, then correct it.

Format: five varied questions, I answer, you score and explain my mistakes.

What you get

A quick test that locks in what you learned. Testing yourself fixes memory better than rereading.

My Doable Routine

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a coach who loves simple habits.

Context: I have learned [language] for [time], I sometimes stall for lack of time.

Task: suggest a 10-minute routine I can truly keep.

Format: three moments in the day, one micro-activity each, a motivating reminder.

What you get

A light habit that lasts. Consistency, not intensity, makes you speak a language.
