GOOD TO KNOW

A plan, not a chore.

Moving is dozens of small decisions at once, often while you are still working. The stress rarely comes from carrying boxes: it comes from mess and forgotten steps. An AI (ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini, Le Chat) can price your budget, build a countdown plan, help you sort your things and forget no formality. It organizes, you decide. Three reflexes first.

- Anticipate, it is all won early

A smooth move is prepared weeks ahead. Moving day is only running a plan that is already set.

- The less you carry, the better

Every box has a cost, in money and in effort. Sorting before packing is the best saving there is.

- AI plans, you decide

It offers budgets, lists and schedules, but you know your own life. Adapt every piece of advice.

The right reflex: anticipate, travel light, and decide for yourself at each step.

THE METHOD

Five moves, ten prompts.

A calm move rests on five moves: budget the project, sort your things, plan the steps, organize the big day and settle into the new place. These 10 prompts take you from the first estimate to finding your feet in the new neighborhood.

Every prompt follows the same recipe: Role, Context, Task, Format. Copy the structure, change the brackets.

The Real Cost

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a moving expert.

Context: I am moving from a [home] in [city A] to [city B], on [date], on a tight budget.

Task: estimate the real, all-in cost.

Format: a table of items (transport, boxes, insurance, deposit, contingency), a range per item, and the total with a safety margin.

What you get

A clear budget before you commit. Knowing the true cost, margin included, spares you nasty surprises at the worst moment.

The Savings

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a smart-spending advisor.

Context: my moving budget is [amount] and I want to cut it without carrying everything alone.

Task: show me where to save without wrecking my back.

Format: three options compared (full DIY, mixed, company), a rough price for each, and the aids or tricks not to forget.

What you get

The right balance of cost and effort. Comparing options before you choose can shave hundreds off the bill.

The Big Sort

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a decluttering coach.

Context: I must sort [one room or the whole home] before I start packing.

Task: guide me room by room, without overwhelm.

Format: for each room, the questions to ask myself, the keep/sell/give/toss rule, and the order in which to attack to move fast.

What you get

Fewer boxes, lower cost, less mental load. Sorting before packing means moving only what truly matters.

The Inventory

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a methodical assistant.

Context: I want to list what I move so I lose nothing and cover my insurance.

Task: help me build a simple inventory.

Format: a table box by box (number, room, contents, fragile or not, estimated value), and the items to photograph before packing.

What you get

Peace of mind if something breaks or goes missing. A numbered inventory finds every item and backs any claim.

The Countdown

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a moving planner.

Context: I move on [date], I have [number] weeks left, and I work during the day.

Task: build me a realistic countdown plan.

Format: week by week up to the big day, the key tasks of each, and a reminder of what absolutely must be done seven days before.

What you get

A clear path instead of a last-minute rush. Spreading tasks over the weeks spares you the sleepless eve.

The Formalities

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a guide to moving paperwork.

Context: I change address on [date], in [city or country], as a [tenant, family, and so on].

Task: list every formality not to forget.

Format: the address changes and cancellations (energy, internet, bank, school, government), sorted by order of urgency.

What you get

No oversight that costs you later. A formalities checklist prevents phantom bills and lost mail.

The Packing Plan

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a packing expert.

Context: I am starting boxes for a [home of such a size], mostly on my own.

Task: give me a clear packing method.

Format: the order of rooms to pack, a simple labeling system (room, priority, fragile), and the list for the box to open first.

What you get

Boxes that stack and are easy to find. Thoughtful labeling saves you hours on arrival.

The Big Day

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are the conductor of moving day.

Context: the move is on [date], with [who helps: friends, a company], access [floor, elevator].

Task: prepare the flow of the day.

Format: an hour-by-hour schedule, who does what, the essential bag to keep on you, and the checks before handing back the old keys.

What you get

A day that runs instead of turning to chaos. A clear flow and known roles prevent tension and oversights.

Moving In

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a settling-in advisor.

Context: I have just arrived in [the new home] and everything is still in boxes.

Task: tell me the order to unpack, stress-free.

Format: the rooms to make livable first, the first-night box to open first, and a three-day plan to set everything up without rushing.

What you get

A calm first night, not a box hunt. Unpacking in the right order makes the home livable that very evening.

The New Neighborhood

PROMPT TO COPY

Role: you are a caring local guide.

Context: I am settling in [neighborhood or city]
and know nothing and no one there.

Task: help me find my feet fast.

Format: the essentials to locate first (health, groceries, transport, school), one idea to meet people, and a first outing to explore.

What you get

A new place that quickly becomes yours. Spotting the essentials and one first meeting turn an address into a home.
